

Carbon Literacy Training and Accreditations

Futureproof your business with Carbon Literacy training and qualifications

Our accredited training has been designed specifically for agricultural, food and land-based businesses by SAC Consulting (part of Scotland's Rural College) and Keep Scotland Beautiful.

With a growing emphasis on sustainable business activity to access funding, and on the measurement and reduction of carbon footprints in the rural, food and land-based industries, it is crucial that there are opportunities to build a broad understanding of the carbon landscape, terminology, and technical information.

The one-day course provides your team, or entire business, with a recognised qualification and the same foundation knowledge to level the playing field towards the Just Transition to net zero, no matter if participants manage a croft or a global multinational.

Participants will enhance their business sustainability credentials and demonstrate commitment to reaching Scottish Government's net zero targets, while helping to futureproof their businesses. Once accredited, teams can embed the knowledge and skills to take tangible action towards measuring and reducing carbon emissions from routine activities in their business.

With a collective responsibility to ensure that we can all understand the carbon impacts of our work, and our life choices, our training will empower you to consider these everyday choices which can positively impact climate change, engaging the entire workforce with the organisation's net zero ambitions.

Our aim is to build a broad understanding of the carbon landscape, terminology, and technical information whilst also gaining a valuable training opportunity and recognised accreditation. We want to support working in these industries to own the space, and positively lead the movement towards net zero for their own businesses, as well as within their local communities.

Training options: We offer a range of virtual training, in-person training around Scotland, or even bespoke training delivered within your organisation.

Costs: Prices vary based on the training options required.
